IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE DISTRICT of Columbia, holding a District Court. In reflection of Princeton place porthwest, in the District of Columbia. District Court, No. 914.—Notice is hereby given that the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress approved April 29, 1919, entitled "An act authorizing the extension of Princeton place northwest, in the District of Columbia," have filed a petition in this court praying the condemnation of the land necessary for the extension of Princeton place northwest, from Georgia avenue to Rock Creek Church road, with a width of not less than sixty feet, upon such lines as the Commissioners may deem best for the public interests, as shown on a plat filed with said petition as pert thereof, and praying also that a jury of five judicious, experienced, dishiterested men, who shall be freeholders within the District of Columbia, not related to any person in interest in these proceeddoubtless, it is some such thought as that that leads to that overweening love of money of which the poet speaks as "the root of all evil." The thought of Coleridge, lacking all selfishness and dwelling only on what the possession of money might do for others, em. phasizes one of the best sides of human character, and it goes to show that the desire to accumulate is not in itself an evil; it only becomes so when it dominates a man, takes complete charge of him, and subordinates all his God-given faculties to that one mean and cringing purpose. For once the love of money, the passionate greed for it, gets into a man's soul, he is of little more use to the world than a mackine that gathers up the dross and serves no other useful purpose.
